The Village of the Arts Summer 2002

A group of GSFA students helped The Village of Arts and Humanities reclaim a vacant lot in North Philadelphia. The lot was cleaned, landscaped, and outfitted with a temporary stage in preparation for the organization's annual performance. Clusters of poles, which resemble Aboriginal grave markers, form a major component of the intervention. The group primed the poles, and local children painted them with brightly-colored patterns, pictures, and messages.
